The Globally Engaged Institution: Washington Connections

In a rapidly expanding and interconnected global environment, U.S. higher education must respond to the imperative for substantive and strategic interaction with higher education institutions in other nations. Active engagement with the rest of the world will be fundamental to high quality undergraduate and graduate education, helping to move students to the larger world in which they will live and work. This ACE Network meeting is designed to help institutional leaders learn how to use the many resources centered in Washington, DC, as they develop strategies for global engagement.
